African drumming whereby a piece of drumming song is made up of a variety of rhythm voicing from a variation of drums.

Lila Drums drumming team bonding session is useful for :

- short energizer session
- half-day recreational session for employees
- customized session to facilitate team effort within small department groups to mass faculty groups.

Our focus for every session is to make aware the significances of accepting diversities within each group, and bring about new insights and dynamics of team cooperation base on the potential of every individual's unique contribution.

These are done through the experience of creating a drumming song with different rhythms that are suppose to 'work' with one another. With Kelvin Kew's mastery of rhythms and Lila Drums' resources of African hand drums, we have customized rhythm that'll enable participants to be effectively engaged in this rhythmic team-bonding experience.

At all of our sessions, participants walked away with a sense of group achievement as they started the session from no rhythmic background to being able to play a drumming song together!
